The Wireless Widow

I've been a widow all my life;
That is, since I have been a wife.
Companing with myself, the time
In solitary pastimes.

God claimed him almost every day,
And, as he nibbled on his way,
I followed in his galley
Or, on the club house porch, drank tea.

At night, Bridge took him from my side,
I couldn't play it - though I tried.
But sat at home, with ill-content,
The while he gambled with the rest.

He gave up both. Said he: "I'm through,
I'll stay at home alone with you."
But Radio's got him. Fiddle me!!
And I'm a Widow once again.
